WATER ON STOVES .- The Boston Journal of Chemistry takes issue with high medical and scientific authorities relative to the common practice of evaporating water upon stoves and furnaces. It asserts that the practice is not conducive to health, that atmospheric air connot be "dried up or burned up" by any heating apparatus of the present day, and that heated air loses none of its moisture. The writer maintains that the trouble is that most housekeepers keep up too high a temperature, and have the sensation of dryness. If the heat of dwellings is kept at a normal standard the warm air contains all the moisture needed for health or comfort. If the temperature is abnormally high, the train of evils which follow are not avoided by evaporizing large quantities of water. In families where this is practised there have been uniformly more catarrhal difficulties, more rheumatism, more headache, than in other houses where no evaporation is allowed, and where the heat is kept at a uniform temperature. It is scarcely necessary to remark that there are other scientific and medical authorities in total disagreement with this theory.

GENIUS AND LABOR .- It is no man's business whether he has genius of not; work he must, whatever he is, but quietly and steadily, and the natural and unforced results of such work will be always the thing that God meant him to do, and will be his best. No agonies nor heart rendings will enable him to do any better. If he be a great man, they will be great things; it a small man, small things; but always, if thus peacefully done, good and right; always, if restlessly and ambitiously done, false, hollow and despicable.

A "big Indian" strayed away from his camp and got lost. Inquiring the way back, he was asked, 'Indian lost?' 'No,' said he, disdainfully, 'Indian no lost-wigwam lost.' Striking his breast, he exclaimed, 'Indian here!

'Oh! where do you get the red for your cheeks?' said a paic, wan young lady to a bright laughing minx. 'Where the roses get their's-in the air and sunlight,' was the reply. A person who was sent to prison for marrying two wives, excused himself by saying"that when he had one she fought him, but when he got two they fought each other.
